We will publish WEDNESDAY, February 7.

ESPERANCE,

BY MATA LANDER.

Author of "Light on the Dark River." "Marion Graham," &c.

One vol. 12mo. Price $1.75.

NOTES OF THE AUTHOR'S SHEETS.

From Transcriber, Boston.

"Mata Lander, the name de plume of this gifted writer, encouraged by the success of her previous works, has written a new novel, which in some respects is superior to her former books, and will attract the same if not greater interest."

"A capital novel of the Bengal order, entitled "Esperance," is about to be issued from Sheldon & Co.'s press. It has many elements of permanent popularity, and its dictio is unexpected.

From The Round Table.

"As we have already hinted, we like the book. It is written in good, plain English, and the attempts at what passes for fine writing are so few that it is hardly fair to criticize them."

The author is a woman, and a character observer, which is saying a great deal for a modern novel. The moral of the book, too, is excellent. Under the guise of an attractive story, Mata Lander utters more wholesome truth than may be found in a dozen novels of the sentimental school. The moral of the causal read might overlook it entirely. As a work of art "Esperance" may encounter severe criticism, but as a really good book—good as a story, good as a reflection of everyday life, and good conveying a valuable moral lesson—we cordially commend it to our readers."
